Kfar Uriya-A Progress Report By RUTH CALE

A year ago or slightly more, the cry of the inhabitants of this pretty village in the foothills of the Judean Mountains in the Jerusalem Corridor was "water." The village looked dried out. Wherever you turned, people were carrying buckets of water, and children were being scolded when they spit some. The villagers got water soon afterwards; Mekorot laid a pipe up the hill, and soon the giant well down in the valley will pump up 500 cubic metres each hour, which

Carrot Appalisers

There's carrot juice, made by grating the vegetable on a glass juice grater, or you can get it already in tina. Chill it, add lemon juice, a hint of sugar, salt and pepper and serve in tall slasses with a sprig of mint. You can make ice cubes of carrot juice (tuck a mint leaf into each compart, ment to freeze into the cube) and these will keep your refresher cold and a surprise to consume.

And here's another idea which has a may of canapes to serve with sherry just before dinner. Serape a large even car-suicide is a punishable of fence, and in practice unsuccessful suicides are not actually imprisoned, but put on probation for a period. This means that during that period the offenders are under the surveillance of experienced psychologists, who do their best to influence the culpris. With the help of a tactful probation officer, a well-meaning if rather gorgon-like elder sister, and above all the lovable evening morting where the words stream down into the square, ... But dmong these Jews, I am the Jew the outcast, wandering down the steep road into the hose and the shope and the hose the square, ... But dmong these Jews, I am the Jew the outcast, wandering down the steep road into the hose all, though the story President, as pointical leaders and electors alike have expressed their wish to see the General as President. Clearly their reason cannot be that they favour his policies—one cannot favour what one cannot favour what one does not know; their readiness over to the keeping of one man whom they trust constitutes a flight from personal political responsibility.

The book is a cautious one. Much of it deals with Elisenhower's personality at length and finds him modest, sincerè, hardworking, and, as yet, unaffected by power and popularity, in fact the superb initial scene, but most worthwhile for people whose tastes run the steep road into the hose. Above all, though the story President, as political leaders and electors alike have expressed their wish to see the General as President. This is a gem of a character study, beautifully written, original in plot. The story is that of a young Englishman tired and disillusioned after the war, who for no specific reason jumps off London Bridge. Suicide, by the by, for no other motive than general fed-up-ness, has always been an Augio-Saxon specialty. A passer-by saves him, but is himself struck by a floating spar and drowns, while the would-be suicide is safely brought to land by the police launch.

According to English law, suicide is a punishable offerce, and in practice unsuccessed and head of the character and admits, is open to deather and along the for the country.
